primarily in the weapons field through the national intelligence machinery might lead to overcrowding an already overworked mechanism. General Trudeau suggested that the entire community is concerned with at least the collection effort in this field, an effort which needs stepping up before existing estimates can be much improved. Mention was made of a current JIC study (603/16, November 1953) pertinent extracts from which the service members felt might be made available to the Federal Civil Defense Administration.

8. General Samford thought it desirable to respond as fully as possible to present and future requestors involved with this subject. He doubted that less than a National Estimate would meet the need.

9. Mr. Dulles recognized that this subject had grown in importance since DCID 3/4 was issued almost two years ago and may require treatment different from that suggested in the Directive. He invited members to consider the matter further, pending a full discussion at a later meeting.

First Annual Report,
Advisory Committee on

11. Action: Approved inclusion of certain language in the AW section of this paper, subject to concurrence by the AEC, whose representative undertook to obtain the Commission's view and communicate with General Samford and the DCI.

12. Discussion: Colonel Lansing stated that the paper was progressing satisfactorily and should be concluded within the week. He circulated an extract consisting of five paragraphs based largely on Tab B, as amended, to IAC-D-45/51 (8 October 1953). Language proposed for addition had been approved by the JAEIC as to substance but not as to use.
